TRICKY WORDS — TELL YOUR CHILD THESE STRAIGHT AWAY

eyes

heart

Dad sat at the fire in his thick wool socks.
I stood near the door with my coat and hat. It was cool outside, and I could hear a soft crunch. I put my ear to the door and heard it again. What could it be out there in the snow?

I pulled the door wide and stepped out into the woods. It was still cool, and I could hear that crunch again. It was near a tall pine tree, but I could not see more. A red tail peeked out, swayed, then went still. I crept near.

Out popped a fox, with neat paws and sharp ears. He looked at me and sat down in the soft snow. I felt a bit of fear, but I did not run. I spoke soft and clear. "Dear fox, you are safe with me."

The fox sniffed and trotted off into the trees. Then a soft tap came near a rock at the stream. Two long ears stuck up, pink and still in the snow. A rabbit was near the rock, under a thin sheet of snow. I kept still.

The rabbit sprang from the rock and ran to the stream. It leapt clear over the water with long, strong legs. Splash, splash, then the rabbit ran on again. I called out as it landed safe and kept on. What a quick rabbit with big pink ears!

Next, I spotted two dark points on a pale mound of snow. They poked up out of the snow like small twigs. I went near and a snort came from under the mound. Was it a log, or was it a deer? I waited, still as a rock, and did not fear.

Out stepped a deer, tall and grand, with big antlers. He stood near me and did not run. I spoke clear and slow. "Hello, deer," I said, "we will not harm you." He looked at me, then stepped off into the trees.

Snow dusted my coat as I ran back to the door. Dad waited there, warm from the fire and keen to hear. "I saw a fox, a rabbit and a deer!" We sat on the floor indoors and read at the fire.
