TRICKY WORDS — TELL YOUR CHILD THESE STRAIGHT AWAY

The morning air was cool and clear. I went with Dad to a market near the old town. It was just starting up. Big sheets of cloth hung from the stands in red, green and blue.

Soon the market was full of people. There was more to see than I had ever seen! Dad went to explore the stands. "Wait at this stand," he said. But then I could not see him.

I looked left. I looked right. I could not see Dad near any door or stand. I did not know where he went. I felt a fear in my chest. I was alone.

Then a boy appeared at my side. He had a big grin on his face. "Are you lost?" he said. I nodded. "I will help you. We can spot him!"

We went from section to section. He knew the direction to go. He picked up a big yellow mango. "Pure sunshine!" he grinned. I could not help but smile back.

We sat on some steps and ate the mangos. The sweet mess ran down my chin. It was the best thing I had ever tasted. I smiled for the first time all day.

Then the boy stopped. He pointed down the street. "Dad must be near!" he said. "Let's go, we can spot him fast!" I felt a rush in my chest.

Dad picked me up and held me tight. I had been so tired and scared. But not any more. "This boy helped me," I said. Dad smiled. "Then he must see us again soon."
